Simple Economics

"The fundamental principles of government finance are exactly the same common-sense principles that we follow in the handling of our own family finances. So long as our government follows these principles our people will prosper. But if our government disregards these principles, it squanders our resources and destroys the public credit."—

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

From THE OWL.

The earliest request for a United States flag occurred June 3, 1777, when an Indian requested that a flag of the United States might be delivered to him to take to the chief of the nation, to be used by them for their security and protection. This request from the Indians may have been the very item which induced congress to provide a flag of the United States. The first starry emblem was made by Mrs. Elizabeth Ross in Philadelphia in 1777. The national flag was adopted June 14, 1777, and the first salute to the Stars and Stripes came on February 14, 1778.

Most people believe that the patriotic custom of placing a flagpole on the schools and floating the flag during the school hours is of recent date, but in May 1812, at Calrain, Mass., on Catamount Hill, a flag-raising program was carried out on the school grounds where a newly chopped pine tree served as the Liberty

What is wrong with this flag and why?

Pole. In the United States the salute with right hand, while the person stands at attention, is the common and accepted method of respect or reverence to the flag. The uncovering of the head is also recognized as a salute. Placing hat above the heart or hand on left breast is also esteemed reverential. Our nation has been slow to adopt any definite pledge to the flag aside from the oath of allegiance.

The three elemental tinctures, Red, White and Blue in our flag, have a definite meaning. The continental Congress has bequeathed the following actual definition: White signifies Purity and Innocence; Red, Hardness and Valor; Blue signifies Vigilance, Perseverance and Justice. The dimensions of original representative American Flag is: Length, 12 feet; width, 7 feet 4 inches; width of each stripe, 6 3/4 inches; stars, 3 1/2 inches from center to points; blue field, 47 1/4 inches wide, 60 inches long.

In every war since the creation of our flag on June 14, 1777, it has had a different arrangement of either stars or stripes, or both. While the basic elements are alike, the design is different. Flag of Revolution, 1777, first war with England, thirteen white stars in a circle in a blue field, seven red stripes and six white stripes. Flag of War 1812, second war with England: Fifteen white stars in a blue field, eight red stripes and seven white stripes. War with Mexico, 1846: Twenty-nine white stars in a blue field, seven red stripes and six white stripes. Civil War of 1861: Eleven states declared that their stars were taken out of the Union, but Lincoln left them in the flag, making 34 white stars in a blue field, seven red and six white stripes. Before the war closed two new stars were added. War with Spain, 1898: Forty-five stars in white on a blue field, seven red and six white stripes. War with Germany or World War, 1917-18: In a field of blue are 48 white stars, seven red and six white stripes. The proportion of the flag has been improved in that the flag is now a trifle longer and not so wide.

"BUD"

From THE OWL.

Ruben Knowles (better known to us as "Bud") was born on a ranch near Biry on April 17, 1884. He is the oldest of the seven children in the Knowles family. (Five brothers and two sisters.) At first he was Brother, then it was shortened to just "Bud".

March 17, 1932, should be a memorable day to all the school, for that was when "Bud" was installed as one of the most essential working parts in the machinery of our Hondo Public School. His ability has kept the other parts "going". He keeps our halls spotless, doors gleaming, and is careful to pick up the bits of paper we carelessly throw on the floor. There seems to be no end to "Bud's" energy. At the word he will willingly hang a picture, tighten a screw, or move a desk.

"Bud" has four children. Three sons and a daughter. Two are living in California, one in Arizona, and one near Hondo. One of his sons entered the ministry and his daughter is a hair dresser in a beauty parlor in California.

Having been raised on a farm, naturally "Bud" likes farm life. Aside from his school work and tamale business, he has a very good garden, raises chickens and pigs, and has a cow. We all wish "Bud" all the happiness and good luck possible and as Walter B. Pitkin said, "Life Begins At 40".

—Owlets—
SCIENCE CLUB MEETING.

The Science Club met last Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock, March 11, 1937. A tin can telephone was set up, and Robert Breiten's crystal radio set was tried, but at the time they could not get any stations tuned in. Several other experiments were set up. Among them was one done with a static machine.

After this the business meeting was held. Field trips in the future were discussed and an amendment to the Constitution was put before the house.

The next field trip will be taken in about two weeks. It will probably be to Tarpley to look at Dinosaur tracks.

IT ISN'T YOUR SCHOOL—IT'S YOU.

If you want to go to a kind of a school That's the kind of a school that you like, You needn't slip your clothes in a grip And start on a long, long hike.

You'll find elsewhere what you left behind, For there's nothing that's really new. It's a knock at yourself when you knock your school; It isn't your school—it's you.

Real schools are not made by students afraid Lest somebody else get ahead; When everyone works and nobody shirks You can make a school from the dead.

And while you make your personal stake Your neighbors can make one too, Your school will be what you want to see; It isn't your school—it's you.

—Owlets—
DON'T USE BIG WORDS.

IN promulgating your esoteric cogitations or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversational communications possess clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibility, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and assinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic verbosity and valetudinary vapidty.

—Owlets—
It is easy to look down on others; to look down on ourselves is the difficulty.—Landon.

Less pains in the world a man can not take than to hold his tongue.—Sir Walter Raleigh.

Simplicity is a jewel rarely found.—Ovid.

To be fashionable these days, one must have experienced an appendectomy or suffered a tonsillotomy—or have read GONE WITH THE WIND.

SECOND GRADE NEWS.

Buster and Patsy Goff visited their grandmother.
Lela is back in school after being sick last week.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

WERE sure you've noticed that the most delicious food served on chipped china reposing on a slightly grubby tablecloth arrests your appetite as nothing else will! You're too fastidious a woman to make these mistakes—but your entire dining room should match the sparkle of your china, your linens, your glassware.

For this reason your window shades should not jar on your eyesight or that of your guests! Shades should be clean and fresh as a spring daisy! The simplest way to achieve this is to hang good cloth shades at your windows. You can order them in tones to match your spring draperies, and blend in with your curtains.

Whatever color you choose, see to it that you get first quality cloth shades. Then you won't have to worry about April showers—for these shades won't crinkle. You can forget about dust—for good shades help to keep out dust. You can be assured that they're hung on seasoned wood rollers. And if all this isn't enough, you can stop worrying about "pin holes." Cloth shades keep their fine appearance.

The literary events and the track meet of the Medina County Inter-scholastic League Meet are winding up the schedule of events here today and tomorrow. The public is invited to attend, a small admission charged for the track and for several of the contests in the auditorium, being made.

MODERN BREADS

HALF a loaf, isn't such a bad portion after all—providing it's half bread and half delicious fruit, which makes the loaf not only more easily digested, but very delicious. The modern trend is for serving more fruits in breads, muffins, biscuits, etc. Modern hostesses find it a most convenient way to provide the desired afternoon tea breads, as well as breads for everyday meals.

Decorative and Delicious

Cranberry Corn Muffins: Beat one egg, add two tablespoons sugar and one cup sour milk. Then add the following sifted dry ingredients: one cup flour, one cup cornmeal, one-half teaspoon soda and one-half teaspoon salt. Stir in three tablespoons melted butter and one-half cup canned cranberry sauce, using the thick part of the sauce instead of the juice. Bake in buttered muffin tins at 400 degrees for from twenty to twenty-five minutes. This makes twelve small muffins.

Pineapple Nut Bread: Sift together the following dry ingredients: two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt and one-fourth cup sugar. Add one egg well beaten, one cup milk, three tablespoons shortening and one-half cup crushed pineapple which has been very well drained. Then add one-half cup of nuts. Bake in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for one hour or until done. Makes a medium-sized loaf.

Mr. F. R. Grube was a business caller at this office Tuesday. Mr. Grube was fortunate in escaping any material damage from the hail of early Saturday morning, but considerable damage was sustained by his neighbors south and west of him. In some instances, where corn was just up in a deep water-furrow, the plants were covered up by the hail beating the soil in upon them.

The Hondo Hatchery is a busy place now, with the two big Buckeye Incubators both running at full capacity and frequent shipments of chicks to go out. Mr. Wilson is highly pleased both with the fertility of the eggs and the high quality of the chicks being hatched from them, both evidence of judicious selection of laying stock and wise care of the flocks by their owners. Mr. Wilson thinks that with the abundance of grain feed and the prospect of lots of green feed, the poultry flocks will be one of the most profitable adjuncts of the farm this season.

A nice rain, accompanied by some lightning and thunder, visited Hondo early Saturday morning. The rain was unfortunately accompanied by considerable hail a few miles west and south of us. The rain was followed by a sudden change to summer like weather Saturday afternoon. This was followed by a norther Saturday night and raw, cold weather prevailed the first of the week with the temperature near freezing Monday and Tuesday mornings.

Mrs. Ed de Montel underwent a major operation at the Santa Rosa Hospital in San Antonio last Friday morning. Mrs. H. E. Haass and Mrs. Fletcher Davis, who visited her Wednesday, found her well on the road to recovery and in a very cheerful frame of mind. Her friends wish her continued improvement.

TARPIEY WINS OVER YANCEY.

Tarpey school's soft ball team defeated the aggregation of Yancey school on Wednesday afternoon, March 10, by a score of 30 to 12. The game was played on the public school diamond at Hondo.

The Tarpeytes outplayed their opponents in every department of the game, amassing 22 hits while the Yancey boys were touching Schmidt for only 7, and committing three errors to their opposition's twelve.

Buster Schmidt, who went the pitching route for Tarpey, was wild at times and suffered badly in the first two innings after which he tightened up and with good fielding support held his opponents to two runs in the last five innings of the seven-inning game.

Grunewald, starting pitcher for Yancey, suffered two disastrous innings, the second and third, in each of which the Tarpey crew garnered ten runs on a combination of hits and errors. Wilson, who relieved him, held the mountain boys to five hits out of which, through several mishaps, eight runs were scored. Erfurt, for Tarpey, was the scoring champion of the day. In six times at bat he scored five times. He hit safely three times, was safe on Grunewald's error once and got hit on a fielder's choice the fifth time. He also batted in five runs to top the list in that line. D. Coffey of Tarpey was a close second with four runs out of six times at bat and B. Coffey managed three runs out of as many times he was charged at bat.

Quite a crowd from Tarpey, including all the teachers and a number of pupils and others, were on hand for the game. A. K. Saathoff furnished a truck for the transportation of most of the team.

LOW EGG PRICES AND HIGH FEED COSTS WORRY POULTRYMEN.

Increasing numbers of hens, record heavy production of eggs per hen, and a total production of eggs about a fifth greater than a year ago are shown in the poultry report as of January 1, just issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Hens were laying about 15 percent more eggs per hen at the beginning of this month than they were a year ago and about 10 percent more than the previous high record for that date (1932). The Bureau reports total production of eggs in the country at the beginning of the month as about 20 percent greater than a year ago.

The relatively large number of meat animals sent to market because of feed shortage through the fall competed with the large crop of turkeys and chickens, making a poor poultry market and resulting in the accumulation of large storage stocks of both meat and poultry. The January 1 report of cold storage stocks showed poultry holdings at a record high for that date. Stocks of eggs in cold storage, however, are comparatively small.

Expensive feed had made production costs very high, so that the low prices received for poultry were the more disappointing. Except for the war year 1917, the present season, as judged by the relation of poultry prices to feed prices, has been the most unfavorable to poultrymen in many years. The unfavorable egg-feed ratio, however, presumably will tend to limit hatchings this spring which in turn should strengthen the spring market demand and prices of eggs for storage.

To prevent mold, dryness and insect injury to his summer meat, Max Mittag, Sr., of Kleberg county put 78 pounds of cured and smoked pork down in refined cotton seed oil. The last of this meat has been eaten and Mittag says the last piece was just as good as the first. To get a check on this method he left out some meat and before it was eaten it had turned yellow and gotten rancid from the hot weather. Mittag said that the meat covered with oil had the same fresh color that it had at the time it was placed in the oil. According to W. L. Wilkinson, county agricultural agent, it took only three and one-half gallons of oil to cover the 78 pounds of meat. The larger pieces were placed in the center of the container and then the smaller pieces were placed around the larger ones, some of the bacon even being sliced to fill out vacant places.

WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON ON SOIL EROSION.

The fight against soil erosion is nothing new. Even in colonial days erosion was recognized as a menace, and we are told by The Progressive Farmer that George Washington himself gave up growing tobacco, began planting clover and practicing crop rotation at Mount Vernon in order to check washing and gullies, while in 1813 Thomas Jefferson made the following statement about his farm in Albemarle County, Va.:

"Our country is hilly and we have been in the habit of plowing in straight rows, whether up or downhill, in oblique lines, or however they lead, and our soil was all rapidly running into the rivers. We now plow horizontally, following the curvature of the hills and hollows on dead level, however crooked the lines may be. Every furrow thus acts as a reservoir to receive and retain the waters, all of which go to the benefit of the growing plant instead of running off into the streams."

Thirteen acres of sudan grass planted on shifted acres under the 1936 agricultural conservation program on his farm in Calhoun county has supplied as much feed during the summer and fall months as 40 acres of native improved pasture. Joe Brett recently told C. E. Nelson, county agricultural agent. Brett planted this sudan grass about March 15, and when the ground was not too wet, about six head of workstock and 25 or 30 head of cattle were grazed on it. The sudan was planted in regular rows and was cultivated about five times during the season. On regular pasture, Brett has mowed weeds once a year for the past five years.

THERE'S no question in the minds of more than a quarter of a million poultry raisers as to what starting feed they will use this spring. The results these folks got last year with the new Startena containing Pur-a-tene exceeded even their fondest hopes. They know what Startena will do so they're taking no chances this year.

Purina Startena for years has been the country's finest starting feed. Now, through the addition of Pur-a-tene, it is made even better. Poultry raisers who fed Startena last year had chicks weighing as much as a pound and a quarter and even more at six weeks.

ARE YOUR HENS GETTING THEIR VITAMIN A?

By Observer.

Of the six known vitamins deemed essential for a complete poultry ration that will meet all the requirements of the flock, the one most likely to be deficient in the ration of the average western farmer is Vitamin A.

Although little is known of the chemical nature of vitamins their continued absence from the poultry ration will be evidenced by the development of deficiency conditions in the birds. Vitamin A is especially important in connection with the health of the flock. Its absence from the ration will lower the resistance of the birds against diseases and makes them especially subject to respiratory ailments. Nutritional roup is a condition caused by feeding a ration deficient in Vitamin A. Workers at the Kansas Agricultural Station state that birds fed a large amount of Vitamin A are less affected by roundworm infestations than those fed rations deficient in this vitamin.

Vitamin A is sometimes called the growth vitamin because animals and fowls fed a ration deficient in this vitamin do not make a satisfactory growth even though the ration may contain a perfectly balanced mixture of the other necessary ingredients.

In a test conducted by the U. S. Poultry Experiment Station at Glendale, Arizona, the effect of Vitamin A on egg production was demonstrated. Groups of twenty-five White Leghorn pullets which had matured on alfalfa range, were placed in laying pens where they could obtain no other feed than that supplied by their keepers. The basal diet which was an all-in-one mash which contained practically no Vitamin A was supplemented in one group with fresh green alfalfa. The other group received only the mash. During the first twenty-eight days the pen receiving alfalfa as a supplement to the mash produced 237 eggs while the other pen only produced 193 eggs. At eighty-four days, the pen receiving the supplementary Vitamin A feed produced 817 eggs while the other pen produced 508 eggs. Over a period of a year the pen receiving the alfalfa produced 3,021 eggs while the other pen produced 682 eggs. Also during this period all the birds receiving no supplementary feed died whereas only six of the other pen died.

Vitamin A contents in the feed also affects the hatchability of the eggs. The less Vitamin A in the feed given the egg producers, the lower the hatchability of the eggs produced.

Green feed which contains Vitamin A is one of the most vital parts of the poultry ration as well as the most economical source of this vitamin. However, most farmers are likely to take it for granted that their flock is receiving a sufficient amount of green feed, especially in sections where green feed grows abundantly in the winter.

On the average, five pounds of green feed should be fed daily for each hundred hens. Care should be exercised in feeding some green feeds such as Swiss chard and lettuce because this feed is so succulent that the chickens will eat enough of it to lessen the mash consumption with a corresponding decrease in egg production. Some green feed such as cabbage and some members of the mustard family should not be fed inasmuch as they flavor the egg with an undesirable taste. White carrots, turnips and mangle beets are valueless as a poultry feed except so far as they produce a variety or a change. Yellow carrots and red carrots are an excellent substitute for green feed and should be fed finely chopped or ground. They are a valuable crop for the poultryman for they may be grown and stored away for use in the winter months when most needed.

Every farmer should make it a practice to plant some patches of green feed near or adjoining his poultry yards. If planted conveniently near his yards, the fowls may graze on it even in periods of inclement winter weather. The most commonly used green feed crops are alfalfa, oats, wheat, barley, lettuce, Swiss chard, and different grasses. Some of these may be grown the year around.

All green feed should be fed before it reaches the woody stage. If cut when the plants are four or five inches high, the plants will continue to produce tender growth without getting woody. If finely chopped and placed in a wooden or earthenware container and covered with water, the grass will retain its succulence for a long period of time.

The most commonly used green feed substitutes are alfalfa meal, alfalfa leaf meal and cured alfalfa hay. The alfalfa leaf meal is the most important of the two meals inasmuch as the leaf and small stems contains most of the Vitamin A of the stalks. Alfalfa meal is high in protein and fiber while alfalfa leaf meal contains a high percentage of Vitamin A contents. The Vitamin A contents are also dependent upon other factors such as the time of year the alfalfa was cut, weather conditions, time it took to cure it, age when cut, exposure to sun, wind, rain and dews. The purchaser of alfalfa meal or alfalfa leaf meal should examine the bag for freshness, greenness and freedom from large stems.

The success of using cured alfalfa hay as a substitute for green feed is somewhat dependent upon the conditions under which the hay was produced and handled. Only the best, bright, green leafy hay should be used. The hay should be placed in a feed rack constructed so as to avoid wastage or it may be ground and placed in containers and covered with water to increase its succulence.

Yellow corn, yellow milo and hegari, three grains commonly used in poultry rations, contain some Vitamin A but only yellow corn is used in the ration in amount enough to supply the quantity of this vitamin needed and most mashers do not use enough yellow corn to supply this need.

Several cod-liver oils contain Vitamin A but some fish oils are prepared principally as a source of Vitamin D. When buying cod-liver oil to use as a green feed substitute, it should be tested for its Vitamin A content.

The amount of green substitutes to be used in a poultry ration is determined by the amount of Vitamin A already in the mash or ration. If 40 or 50 per cent of the ration is composed of yellow corn, about five percent of the total feed intake should be of a good quality alfalfa leaf meal. If the ration contains 40 to 50 percent of red milo or hegari, the alfalfa meal should amount to eight to ten percent of the total feed intake. It is advisable under any system of feeding to include at least five percent alfalfa leaf meal in the ration. Use cod-liver oil as recommended along with five percent alfalfa leaf meal in the mash.

If poultrymen realized the absolute necessity and the importance of using green feed or its substitutes, for promoting better growth, health, egg production, hatchability, etc., considerable more attention would be given to this side of the feeding program.

ONE FIELD WAS TERRACED AND THE OTHER GULLIED.

A comparison of two fields near Mankato, Kansas, during a recent rain, brought out strikingly the value of terraces. The fields were of about the same size and slope. One field was terraced and one was not.

Run-off from these two fields was measured by the Soil Conservation Service and the quantity of silt carried by the water was determined. More than 30 times as much surface soil was removed from the terraced field as from the gullied field. The water running off from the terraced field was muddy brown, but the water coming out of the terrace channels was relatively clear.

The appearance of the two fields immediately after the rain also presented a contrast. The terraced field was covered with miniature lakes—water that was soaking into the ground and being stored in the subsoil. The gullied field was covered by thousands of miniature gullies—each one carrying valuable moisture and soil away from the field.

The Soil Conservation Service emphasizes, however, that terracing is only one of several effective methods to control soil erosion and that all terraces on cultivated land should be supplemented by proper crop rotations and tillage methods.

A preliminary survey at the end of October showed that 41 trench silos had been filled in 10 of the 13 communities of Castro county. Of these, 32 have been constructed this year to take care of the heavy crop of grain sorghums.

FREEMAN W. BURFORD.

He believes that the natural resources of Texas should be used for the benefit of all Texans; that is, that factories should be established in this State to manufacture the finished products from oil, cotton, cattle, and everything else produced in this State, and the finished manufactured products shipped to other States, instead of us sending the raw products to Eastern States to be manufactured there and sold back to us, and the people of Texas losing all the profit and increased taxes, or income, that we would have if we manufactured the different commodities in the State. He believes in developing Texas to the fullest extent, so as to benefit the people of Texas most directly.

FARM WOODS PROFITABLE.

Farm woodlands are not only helping to control soil erosion but are paying farmers on Coon Creek, Wis., Soil Conservation Service project area good dividends, according to John Fry, of the Soil Conservation Service forestry staff.

Fry made a study of 118 farms within the area in the winter of 1934-35 and found that the average farm woodland produced more than 11 cords of fuel wood, worth $4 per cord; 649 board feet of lumber, worth $25 per thousand; 41 railway ties, worth 35 cents each; and 259 posts, worth 10 cents apiece.

Fry's survey showed that the average farm included in the study produced in 1 year woodland products valued at $101.67. Approximately 85 percent of the woodland products, valued at more than $87, were used on the farm and would have cost the farmer $228 a year if he had bought them on the open market. Thus, the farmer averaged an annual saving of about $141 apiece by utilizing woodland property. As a single example, the fuel wood used annually on the average farm was equal in heating value to 9 1-2 tons of anthracite coal.

With honey production below the demand, farmers interested in diversified agriculture would do well to turn to bee keeping, according to H. F. Wilson of Madison, Wis., head beekeeper of the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the finance committee of the American Honey Institute. He was in San Antonio attending the International Beekeepers Conference on November 24th. The three quarters of a million beekeepers in the United States have produced 40,000,000 pounds of honey annually during the last ten years.

Here is how one mother solved the problem of improving her young daughter's speech: She gave to the daughter an allowance of $1.00 a month and whenever "young daughter" made a grammatical error, which was discovered by some member of the household, she was fined one penny. At the end of the month, the fines were subtracted from her allowance.

Delicious home-made ice cream is very easily and quickly made in the modern ice cream freezers. And here are two helps for quick freezing: First, use 3 parts ice and 1 part salt—the best proportion for quick freezing. Second, do not use too much sugar in the recipe as it slows down the freezing.

To prevent cup cakes from sticking to the bottom of the baking tins, cut a number of wax paper rounds just big enough to fit the bottom of the individual cup cake pans. Put one of these in each cup before pouring in batter and when baked, cakes will come out without difficulty.

To melt a small quantity of butter, place it in the bowl of a soup ladle and hold over top burner flame. The handle is long enough to keep your hand well away from the flame.

A SAVORY SALMON LOAF in time for Lent! Drain liquid from one No. 2 can of salmon, remove bones and skin, and flake. Add 1 cup stale bread crumbs, 1/2 cup of chili sauce, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons onion (cut fine) and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Mix well. Place in well greased loaf pan and bake in moderate oven (350°) for approximately 45 minutes. Unmold and garnish with lemon rings, pimiento strips and parsley. This salmon loaf can be stored, until ready to bake, in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator with no fear that the fish odor will be transmitted to other foods. The air-conditioning chamber of the new ice refrigerator provides circulating cold air which is constantly washed free of food odors. Savory Salmon Loaf is delicious served with a casserole of potatoes au gratin, or whipped potatoes on the half shell.

the iron-hand of bureaucratic oppression.

Attacks to socialize the railroads are unjustified in principle and dangerous in practice. No industry has shown a finer spirit of service. It is one of the largest employers in the nation, and in the last 12 months alone it has increased its payroll by 100,000 workers. Its wage rates and working standards are unsurpassed.

Adoption by the government of a policy that would give the rails a fair competitive break and assure them that they will not be subjected to unfriendly and expensive legislation, would spur railroad development and lead to the spending of millions of dollars of private capital. Most important of all, it would save the country from threats of government ownership of the railroads—and that would be a boon to every citizen and taxpayer.—Industrial News Review.

ANOTHER GOOD INTENTION HEADED WRONG.

Senator Tom Connally of our proud State of Texas takes pride in the authorship of a measure he has just proposed in the United States Senate the aim of which is said to be to "Take the Profit out of War".

If that were its only purpose its aim would be commendable.

But with that end concede, the method proposed to achieve it is open to objection on both moral and practical grounds.

It is proposed by the measure that in the event the United States becomes involved in war increased taxes will become automatically effective—not to "raise necessary funds for the maintenance of the government economically administered" but to "prevent industry from profiting out of war".

No matter how the principle may be flouted in America, it is a fact that the power to tax for any other purpose than to "maintain the government economically administered" is the power to take without compensation, the power to destroy, and the process proposed for achieving its alleged purpose is, therefore, without justification in good morals.

From the practical standpoint, it is open to two objections.

Industry exists on earned profits and operates to earn them. Therefore, industry would either in the first place, find means of passing on its added tax burden to the consumers of its products, thereby adding to the expense of war; or, in the second place, failing to earn profits, would cease to function.

In either case, the purpose of the tax increase would be defeated; and in event it assumed the latter form, the government would be forced either to buy from foreigners or take the industries over and run them—a more expensive process by far than leaving them to function in regular

SECO 4-H GIRLS CLUB.

"Canning is the application of heat to food in air-tight containers to preserve it as nearly as possible in a condition similar to that of the freshly harvested product," said Miss Irene Hawkins, Medina County demonstration agent, to the members of the Seco 4-H Girls Club, which met at the school house Friday, March 5.

She gave a demonstration in canning carrots. These were pre-cooked, scraped, and cut in lengths desired before being put into glass jars. After hot water had been poured into the jars, they were sealed, placed in a pressure cooker, and processed for 35 minutes under ten pounds pressure.

Club members attending were: Lucille Pichot, Melverda Poerner, Mary Ann Lutz, Catherine, Marie and Gertrude Weynand.

Two members were absent. Gertrude Weynand, Reporter.

order and destructive of that patriotic individualism that has been the strength and support of this government in the past.

A third objection, which might be offered is that such a procedure, to succeed would have to do so in violation of the spirit if not the letter of that clause of the Constitution which says private property cannot be taken for military purposes without due compensation.

But what is the Constitution among New Dealers?

These objections, however, are to the means proposed to be employed in accomplishing the measure's purported purposes.

The measure is open to a much more serious objection, one that seems to have escaped the most astute minds and yet one that should arouse the alarm of every one with any consideration for the liberty we now enjoy and which the proposed measure would destroy.

Let Mr. Connally speak! Says he: "The War Profits Bill provides for the drafting of industrial plants and factories and munitions and supplies. It musters money as well as men. It calls to the colors a vast industrial army as well as the marshall of America. It announces the policy that dollars shall not be more sacred than human life. It enunciates the doctrine that in time of war and crisis every resource and every instrumentality to secure victory and the triumph of American arms shall be at the command of the government of the United States."

It takes no flight of imagination to see that under the operation of such a proposal, an ambition-crazed executive would have only to provoke a brawl, either foreign or internecine, to place himself in dictatorial control of both the lives and property of his "subjects".

Strange that, with the lessons of so recent a war as the World War, any American could willingly consent to vesting such power in the hands of any man or set of men!

Yet some of the men who suffered most from that high-handed measure—the draft—in that unholy meddling in foreign affairs are among its most ardent advocates—we fear for resentment at their imposition rather than a well considered interest in our country's welfare.

It is evident from the absence of some such protection in the bill of rights, and certain incidents of the early military history of our country, that our forefathers never expected that free men would ever submit to being drafted to fight a war of aggression on foreign soil or would need to be drafted to defend their own country against invasion.

In reliance upon that devotion of free-men lies the best assurance that their country will continue to deserve it and thereby best assure its safety against dangers both from without and from within.

Or is this country ripe for becoming the plaything of a war-lord?

IN MEMORIAM.

Thoughts on the death on Tuesday night, February 2, 1937, near Holly Springs, Mississippi, of a much loved boyhood friend, Charles Strickland.

Friend of my boyhood,
Life's golden, glorious age
When all the world
Was bright and fair,
They tell me—
You are dead!

Blow gently then, oh winds,
O'er his lonely grave!

But though Winter's winds
Blow wild and cold
They shall blow in vain
To chill the love your memory claims.

And never shall the Spring's
Gentle zephyrs caress to life
Plant more generous
Than your noble heart.

Never Summer's breezes,
Nature's alchemist of life and growth,
Bring to ripening
Fairer fruit
Than your unselfish deeds.

And never the Autumn winds
That tell of harvest done
Shall know more abundant yield—
For yours is the sum
Of your every mortal breath.

Blow gently then, oh winds,
For here lies a man;
And though
You blow as you listeth best
He has earned his mortal rest!

And may not we who linger here
Take hope that one so useful in his humble place
Has found, beyond this finite sphere,
A Father's "Well Done" as he meets
Him face to face!
—FLETCHER DAVIS.

MY NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

I now resolve to do my best—
In each and every daily test;
No matter what the task may be—
Its benefit, I'll try to see . . .
From every past mistake I've made,
I'll profit toward a higher grade;
And, be my problems great or small,
I'll try to solve them, one and all.

To every one, whom I may find
Along my way, I shall be kind;
And, to all needy ones, I'll give
All I can spare to help them live;
In worthiness, I'll stand behind
In strong defense of all mankind;
And, in love's circle without end,
I'll see, in every one, a friend.

I now resolve, from day to day,
To do my best—in every way. . .
If I should fail, in any part,
It will not be from out my heart,
'Tis thus, again, I start a new—
With good intentions in my view;
And, as the New Year does begin,
I pray my resolutions win . . .
—KATHARINE NEAL SMITH.

The labor movement began in Texas as early as 1857, it is revealed in the records of the oldest labor organization in Texas, which have just come into the possession of the University of Texas Library, the gift of the Galveston Typographical Union, which was chartered as a unit of the National Typographical Union in 1860. The records, in nine volumes, contain many interesting comments about the early residents of Galveston. From these pages it is discovered that a Judge Joel Miner attended a Convention of the National Typographical Union in New Orleans representing the Galveston Union, in 1857. It is this date that marks the beginning of the labor movement in Texas.

MARKETING SHEEP AND GOATS AT SAN ANTONIO.

By Fred M. Herndon.

While the San Antonio public livestock market is reputedly the largest goat market of the country, no bragging can be done of the past as a sheep market.

Although San Antonio is the closest public market to the sheep and goat country, the receipts at San Antonio are, and have been for months, far short of the actual local requirements.

Should producers of South and West Texas realize the true potentialities of San Antonio as a sheep and lamb market, they would assist in building the market by shipping good to choice quality to the San Antonio market.

The closer to home the producer can market, the more to his advantage, because of the saving in shrinkage and transportation costs.

Unfortunately, most of the receipts at San Antonio during recent months have been of plain to medium quality, while the demand has been for good to choice quality, and with one of the largest packing companies operating a large plant at San Antonio, two other local U. S. inspected plants, several local plants and buyers making purchases for outside plants, with the assistance of producers and shipper there is no reason why a substantial sheep and lamb market cannot be built at San Antonio.

Pack buyers have freely indicated they are not only willing, but anxious to pay prices comparable with the prices paid at other markets, quality considered of course, and the Union Stock Yards Company of San Antonio, in cooperation with the marketing agencies, are exerting every effort to interest producers to ship to San Antonio.

POULTRY FLOCKS ADD TO CASH INCOME.

Poultry flocks play an important part in providing food for farm families in South Texas and also in adding to the cash income, reports from county agricultural agents indicate that farm flocks are continually being improved.

"The borders in my flock were keeping me from making a profit," said Walter Staton of San Patricio county after he culled out 84 hens from his flock of 300 chickens. Staton sold the culs for 14 cents a pound and used the money to buy baby chicks from high producing hens.

A new brooder and chicken house helped Lloyd Neumann, poultry demonstrator of San Patricio county, to raise 334 out of 350 baby chicks.

After the county agricultural agent prescribed fowl cholera vaccine, Miss Victoria Guerra of San Juan de Dios, Starr county, spent $1 for vaccine and vaccinated most of her chickens and turkeys. Later she reported that she did not lose a bird that had been so treated, but suffered heavy losses on the remainder of her flock.

The records kept by W. A. Talley, a poultryman of Bayside, Refugio county, in the calendar furnished to poultry demonstrators, reveal that his flock of Rhode Island Reds made an average profit of $21.61 per hen for the past year.

With an average of 175 barred Plymouth Rock hens, W. O. Wawarofsky of Waller county produced 2,060 dozen eggs, valued at $478.60, in 10 months. Wawarofsky for the past three years has been carrying on a breeding program whereby pedigreed male birds are placed at the head of a breeding flock of hens selected for high production. This practice, combined with blood testing for disease, has enabled him to average 14 eggs per hen per month and to sell his eggs at a premium of

A fierce norther struck here Saturday night and which came six weeks after February 2nd, shattered the tradition of the Ground Hog which on that day did not see its shadow and remained out and the weather was supposed to stay warm. "Practical agriculturists whose main income is from their dairy production as well as men who take up livestock breeding as a vocation or hobby are brought together in The American Jersey Cattle Club by their common admiration for the Jersey cow."

Although Texas and Louisiana mines produce nearly 99 per cent of American mined sulphur, on the world market competition from government-subsidized foreign producers and from by-product sulphur in 1935 reduced America's share of world sulphur production to less than 26 per cent.
